3,000 years of healing power in a modern package

The balanced combination between traditional Chinese medicine and a modern form of TCM application.

Traditional Chinese medicine states: yin and yang must be balanced in a healthy body. Qi energy must be able to flow to the energy channels = meridians.

The product consists of, among other things, moxa and 33 other minerals. The energy deficient qi is compensated through activation with atmospheric oxygen by thermal radiation. When the qi is able to flow, health improves.
